Solomon Taylor Simpson (Lebanon)

NOV 29, 1993 - MAY 16, 2013

Service for Solomon will be held at 4pm on Thursday the 23rd of May, in St. Paul's Episcopal Church parish room in Fayetteville, Arkansas. Everyone is welcome. There will be a tribute with his music on the square at the Fayetteville Farmers Market this morning (Saturday). A memorial fund for local arts will be established with The Bank of Fayetteville.

Celine, Clementine, and I were informed of the death of our beloved son, Solomon this morning. We are all devastated, but we want to celebrate his life and the time we spent with him. If you knew him, I am sure he touched your life too. He was a beautiful soul. He always had hugs for us and his friends. He was a talented musician and brought music into our lives. When I last saw him, he had just added the finishing touches to a song he had written and recorded. It is a beautiful song that starts out by asking, "What is love?" and answering "I love the life I know." Solomon loved life. He loved his family and friends. And we loved him.

I was Solomon's math teacher last year. I can't say this about many teenage boys butSolomon was a lovely young man. Even though math was not his first love (probably not even his tenth love!) he was still responsible and conscientious about his work - he didn't give up when it got difficult. One of my favorite memories of Solomon was when he asked if he could leave class a little early because he wanted to go set up his musical equipment outside so he could surprise his girlfriend with a musical request to the dance.After class, I rushed downstairs to see what had happened - of course, she said yes!Solomon was one of my favorite students for so many reasons - I will miss himSusan King - Fayetteville High School

I was Solomon's English teacher when he was in the ninth grade. I remember him as a very kind and gentle young man. One memory of Solomon that year was when he played his guitar for a Romeo and Juliet project. Although I haven't seen Solomon for several years, I still remember him and I am very sad.
