This little kiddo stole my heart with his very first hug, but it took me introducing him to chocolate pudding before he finally decided I was going to be worth his time. We may live in a complicated world, but his was much more simple. Happiness for him meant hugs from his favorite people and, of course, his favorite cartoons. My presence had meant cartoon time was over for a bit, which just might be why it took chocolate to eventually win him over. I wanted so much more for him. Working with him for just a short time a few days a week warmed my heart... I will always treasure the privilege granted to me in being a part of his life. I was so looking forward to this upcoming school year with him. But back to Jimmy Let me tell you, as a teenager, this kiddo did not like books; he absolutely did not like listening to me read...until I just happened to read the right book. Turns out his grandmother, Belinda whom I'd heard sweet things about, used to playfully growl at him when he was younger. Well, if you've ever read the book, I'm a Shark, you know it involves growling. From that moment on, he enjoyed books. Well, it was really only that one book, but we read it repeatedly. His smile, his laugh, his escape tactics...they were all unique...all his own. His own story was much too short for me. I wanted more time. I'm selfish and I wanted more time for him on earth to add to his story. But in this moment, I can still see his sweet little sleeping face, and I can't help but think he is now experiencing more than he ever could before. He is going to be greatly missed by those who loved and cared for him~his great aunt and his nurses, whom I witnessed firsthand. During his service, I got to see many others who also loved him, and I got to hear loving words from his big sister. I'm wishing, everyone who loved him, peace.

My sweet Angel! In this life it wasn't the fairest for either of us. Day one when u was born we lived at St. John's hospital in Springfield. I would read The Harry Potters to you everyday day. Some days the your NICU nurses would come n on their lunch time just to sit and enjoy some Harry Potter as well. It away my greatest joy to finally bring you home after 8 mo and your sister was so happy to have you home so we all could be together for the first time. I'll say it wasn't easy being 19 years old working factories hrs. and trying to take care of all of us on my own, tht when u turned 1 1/2 yrs old I told ur Gma B. I was struggling trying to keep us surviving and couldn't do it on my own. That's when ur Gma B and Papa Roger took you in for me and gave you one of them most greatest life as you gave them the greasiest gift in life which was just you. I know you are in Both of their arms right now in Heaven. I Loved you more than words could ever explain and stills grows with each passing moment. A memorable moment.... Gma B was Sick, called mommy! So me, ur sissy Teneice, and bubba Aidan came and stayed... U and Aidan was hanging out in but room watching cartoons and playing. Sissy came and read to you boys, Then came and enjoyed a movie with Gma B and me. We love and miss you bukoo bunches and waiting for the day We get to be together again.

I had the pleasure of being little "Jimmers", as his grandma Belinda called him, nurse from 2005-2008, from the day he came home from the hospital and for 3 years I watched him grow, come off a ventilator, have his trach taken out and improve so much. I loved him, he had the best smile and always made Belinda and I laugh. She loved him more than anyone could ever, God bless her for taking him and raising and loving him until she passed. Now they're together again. Rest in peace sweet Jimmy, you have been through so much, now nothing but joy in heaven with Grandma. Also bless his aunt's who took care of him after Belinda was gone, you're all angels.
